For each joint account, it is assumed that the account holders are entitled to equal portions of the deposit, unless proven otherwise. Interest and other items accrued on the deposits are calculated for the purpose of the Act up to the day on which, pursuant to Article 3 paragraph 5, the deposits became inaccessible. The resulting total amount of inaccessible deposits, is then, for the purpose of compensation calculation, reduced by any forfeited deposits^{13a)}, as well as by all liabilities of the depositor towards the bank, according to the balance on the day, when, pursuant to Article 3 paragraph 5, the deposits became inaccessible; any later changes to this conditions shall not be taken into account. (6) Depositors with a special relationship to the bank as stated in special regulations¹⁵⁾ at any time in the year prior to the day the deposits became inaccessible are not entitled to compensation; this also applies to forfeited deposits. For this period the Fund may require, in accordance with Article 12, paragraph 1, a list of such persons from the bank.

(7) Compensation may not be claimed by depositors who

- a) in part or entirely caused the bank's incapability to repay deposits due to criminal activities for which they have been duly convicted in a court of law,
- b) made deposits of illicit proceeds from criminal activities, which have been declared as such in a court of law.

(9) Pursuant to Article 6 of the Act, banks are required to contribute to the Fund for deposits described in paragraphs 6, 7 and 8.
